

Library of Congress

In October 1908, William Jennings Bryan addresses a crowd at Utica, N.Y. In this issue, Jeffrey G. Mora recounts Bryan's rail travels during his 1896 bid for the White House.

- 8 Electrification Over the Sierra Nevada
SP without cab-forwards?
It could have happened.
By William D. Middleton

- 42 Fighting a Blizzard with the Wireless in 1914
How the Lackawanna Railroad pioneered the use of train radio.
By Tommy Meehan

- 16 Upholding the Standard
An inside look at how Baltimore & Ohio adapted its dining service to a changing market. By William F. Howes, Jr.

- 48 The Curious Disappearance of America's First Locomotive
What happened to Stephenson's Pride of Newcastle?
By Robert B. Thayer

- 30 Art in the Age of Steam
An important exhibition looks at technological change through the eyes of contemporary artists.
By Ian Kennedy

- 69 Thoughts on the Thayer Article
A rebuttal.
By Bill Withuhn

- 72 Whistle-stop Pioneer
William Jennings Bryan and the 1896 presidential campaign.
By Jeffrey G. Mora