

California State Railroad Museum

Casey Jones, left, was immortalized by a song praising his bravery. He actually died as a result of going too fast, as was his custom, and colliding with a stopped freight train. Fireman Sim Webb, right, jumped and lived to a ripe old age.